

HISTORY AND PROJECT OF A STREET: JAIME ROIG. VALENCIA.

From urban dwelling to housing in the open city

Abstract

This investigation focuses on the architectural study of a street, in a serie of interventions destined for collective housing, which developed over a period of time in a concrete place in the city of Valencia with the hypothesis: Is Jaime Roig a street that demonstrates the change of the urban house to housing in the open city?

The thesis studies case by case the buildings that form this street, dividing his study in different aspects: plant type and groundfloor plant, extending it by reference to the residential architecture in Spain published in spanish journals during the period near to its construction. The whole pertinent material has been met from different files and each of the buildings has been drawn allowing to establish a base map that unifies the analysis.
