

ABSTRACT

The aims of the present work are to document the context and the content of the copy of August, 1975 of Architectural Design, Women in Architecture and to see the sense and validity of a re-edition or equivalent edition 40 years later. The temporary lapse of the study focuses, basically, about the year 1975 and, about 2015.

The resultant study consists of the following parts:

Context:

- a) Study of context in the 70s where it is checked both the social and economic environment and the architectural one, especially regarding to women and architecture.
- b) Articles that explain the incorporation of the gender perspective to architecture and to urbanism.

The magazine Architectural Design 8/1975, Women in Architecture:

- c) A detailed study of the magazine like an object in itself.
- d) A critical review of some works of architecture produced by women architects that contributed to the magazine of 1975.

A review of the International Seminar Women in Architecture in Valencia: a description of the debate held in Valencia and of the result of the same one, and the same for the international Seminar in London.

Considerations for a new edition, today.

Conclusions

In addition, annexes with conversations with protagonists of the magazine are provided.
